The grounds upon which it would seem desirable to continue to call juries, resolve themselves mainly into the general considerations which make juries a desirable means of arriving at judicial or quasi judicial decisions. But these reasons in favour of a jury obviously apply but very little, to merely preliminary investigations. __ In a final trial, it is of extreme importance to obtain an impartial and unbinesed body to appeal to on the facts of the case, and juries have been considered upon the whole the the case, as his clients had not been notified. best bodies for securing this end. The telegraph yesterday brought news of the death of an old resident of Singapore, the Hon. John James Greenshields, M.L.O., whose sojourn amougst, us has extended over a quarter of a century. Mr. Greenshields was a man well known and highly respected by every one in the place. An able speaker, it might be said a born orator, and a citizen imbued with great public spirit, he was ever ready to take netive part in any public movement, and to defend the interests of the place whenever they were in threatened danger. Whether as a merchant, a public speaker, or as member of the Legislative Council, Mr. Greenshields has al ways laboured to promote the prosperity of the Hongkong and Whampon Dock Company's trade and the welfare of the Settlement, and cerely mourned by all who knew him.

THE CANADIAN BAILWAY SCANDAL (Spectator, September 20th.)

The Canadian Prime Minister, Sir John Mucdonald, has appeared before the Royal Commission on the Pacific Railway scandal, and admitted that he received $45,000 from Sir Hugh Allan, to be employed in influencing the elections for the province of Ontario. Sir John Macdonald douies that there was any corrupt compact with Sir Hugh Allan,-that the money was to be regarded as paid in consideration of the charter granted to the Company, of which Sir Hugh was to be chairman. There may have been no compact actually expressed, but, we apprehend, the members of the Commission must be persons of much more inuccent and unsophisticated minds than are usually given to politicans on the North Amercian continent. they do not conclude that there was a very clear between the. Minister and the contractor. Sir John Macdonald admits that he bad promised the Presidency of Pacific Railway to Sir Hugh Allan shortly before the sum alladed to was paid. Sir Hugh Allan, ip a letter to which we drew-attention on the 9th of August, declared that he was already sure of 27 out 45 of the French Conservative Members, so that his difficulty, as well as that of the Government, was with the Members for Outario province. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, publishe at the Daily Press Office; Hongkong. INOR comprehensiveness and practical service

this Work stands unrivalled. All tae new words which the Chinese have of late years been. compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained . . The typography displays the success of an attempt t make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those ast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work. the following facts are submitted for consideration. LONELY. Sitting lonely, ever lenely, Waiting! waiting for one only, Phus I count the weary moments passing by And the heavy evening gloom Crather slowly in the room, and the chill November darkness dims the sky

Now the countless busy feet Cross cach other in the street, And I watch the faces flitting past my door; But the step that lingered nightly. · And the hand that rapped so lightly, And the face that beamed so brightly-Come no more.

By the firelight's fitful gleaming I am dreaming, I am dreaming, and the rain is slowly falling all around And voices that are nearest, of friends the best and dearest. appear to have a strange and distant sound. Now the weary wind is sighing.

And the murky day is dying,

And the withered leaves lie scattered round my But that voice, whose gentle greeting Set this heart so wildly beating At each fond and frequent meeting, Comes no more! 7 -

A CHINESE STAGE-LION. A curious, beast issues from the covere den, said to be the pet limit of Joss. I doubt if Cuvien over even, dreamt of such a specimen of the Felis Leo. It dashes round the stage, its monster eyes glaring and mouth It is about twelve feet long, by five or six feet high. It is covered with cloth to imitate skin; our man under the shoulders to work the bead, and one under the tail: the undulations of the body being most eccentric. I pily the poor fellow who personated the tail, the peculiar jerk of which was inimitable, as he had to scamper after the mad loanings of the head. Head seats himself-on a table, and eats grass : but by when tail has gathered up the long body, and hopes for a rest, off rushes head to the farther end of the stage; poor tail tumbling off the table as he best can. Head sits down and cats fire, grins and bows; tail.waggles all the time, keeping the spectators in a roar. The same thing is repeated over and over for hours, and still a sea of upturned faces surrounds the stage .- From " Sub-Tropical Rambles," by Nicholas Pike.

ITALIAN PROVINCIAL LIFE. "The house of our destination was entere at the back by a narrow passage: On presenting myself I was met by a venerable looking gentleman in a long coat, and wearing a berretta or cap of dark velvet on his head. He had a long grey beard, a mild expression of countenance, an eye undimmed · by age, and that gentleness and repose o manner and demeanour which is the proper heritage of ages of culture and refinement At the same time his daughter came forward with a pleasant smile. She had passed the age of girlhood, but was still young. With considerable claims to good looks, she was something belter than good-looking. Her smile was as open as sanshine, her manner casy and elegant. She, welcomed me as the lady of the house, and said that they had provided accommodation for us with them. In vain I protested against the inconvenience that three guests, and those strangers, must make in their quiet household. No nay pared, and we must come. The warmth and renerosity of our reception; than, which nothing could have been more friendly or homelike, soon but us at our case. The house was a very old-fashioned one, built of good solid medieval stone. It was one of those situated on the edge of the precipice, overlooking the picturesque, winding valley through which the yellow river flowed in sweeping curves, and long-tracked lines. The interior consisted of a central hall, in which was a ponderous fire-place surmounted by a beavy stone cornice, something like our English residencies of three hundred years ago. Out of this central hall the bed-chambers opened, The room was ornamented with some very ereditable oil paintings from the hand of our necomplished hostess. 'A guitar with some music lay upon the table; other signs of cultivated occupation being visible. What was not the least remarkable was that in one of the dirtiest towns of Italy, apparently with me underground drainage, and ain'd so much that was squalid and filthy, here the most perfect and scruptions cleanliness reigned throughout; from speckless linen to wellwashed floors and walls." - From the " Pilgringing of the Tiber," by W. Davies.

- MADONNAS.

Whatever may be the faults of the doctrine of the worship of Mary, in one aspect having to hold his tongue for the sake of a it certainly has the excellence of placing before women a beautiful and ennobling ideal -the mother of God in sweet simplicity. humility, and perfect purity. In days of church-faith-this lowly royal woman-sheds a transfiguring light on all feminine souls. The last he flamed out, and openly expressed his Queen of Heaven is sister of the daughters, sympathy with the French revolution, darof earth, and therefore all women are of royal relationship. But the voice of superstition | the government of Great Britain. Informaspoils ideality; that-voice brings the blush tion was at once conveyed to the Board of surors .of shame on the faces which had just been Excise; an inquiry was instituted, and raised towards Mary in loving admiration. Burns would have been dismissed, had it not. and pure aspiration. The doctrine of the been for the good offices of some of his "Immuculate Conception" casts thereflee-friends .- Golden Hours. tion of impurity on God's law, and insults maternity. For does not the notion that Jesus land no human father insinuate that all mothers but Mary are impure? Thus, while the church would exalt the female principle. it insults and degrades our mothers. The higher view is to see all that is lovely in the ideal-Mary, as the possible of all mothers,the beautiful woman of church-tancy as the prophecy to be more or less fulfilled in all women. The actual Mary, many a mother in our own day may far surpass in all the grace's of character: the Mary of imagination, they may never reach. Neither is it desirable to have our women in all respects like the church's Madonna; she is not the best ideal of womanhood. There is too much softness in the character of the church's ideal woma for a perfect character. In great rich matured men, there is always a fine touch of the womanly tenderness; and, in full complete womanfood, there is an element of masculine power; otherwise there is weakness of character,—the human being simply a moral windpointer. The feminine mature is not necessarily inferior to the masculine. In fine ing and Farming Stock, Ships in Port, Hor- 131, 132, and 135 of the Articles of Association, perceptive power, in case and grace of many ner, in richness and intensity of sympathy, I and in-all the tender ministries of life, woman is man's superior. And there are cases in which her mental genius has raised her to equality with the most gifted of men. Generally, woman's education is not so favourable as man's to the development of her mental powers. And, so long as she has this disadvantage, it is simply an injustice to ber to say that she is naturally man's intellectual inferior. Give her the same opportunities as, man for mental culture, and in due time the result will decide her position in the domain of intellect. Her powers of mind may be different from man's, but not therefore inferior to his. The poetic genius is very different from the strictly logical genius, but THE SAMARANG SEA AND FIRE INSUthere nery be no inferiority in either; both may be equally great in their respective ways. And so the feminine genius of mind may be of a different kind from that of the masculine, yet one may not be above or more important than the other. In some pictures of 15 per cent. the Madonua, justice has been done to the ideal intellectual expression of Mary, the warmth and tenderness of affection are bleuded with the dignity of intellect, and the softness of sympathy is kept from weakness amongst such of the Insurers as have paid by force-of will. And when our women cease to be more butterfly beings, and educate the higher qualities of their nature, they will

the equals and companions of men in the things of mind. Women's rights will come to them as the necessary results of women's higher mental life. Freedom will be the outgrowth of that life, and make the larger and ever larger liberty-sphere of the daughters of light. The foverish graving for sensation. the ille gossip, the sonseless round of visits, the distate for quiet useful work, the dislike of the graver studies, and the vanity-weakness for dress, will pass away; more elevating and substantial pleasures will take their places, and justice will be done to the mental and moral expression of our English Madonnas .- Truthseeker.

ROBERT BURNS. We may indeed compare him in many features of his character to-King David, but he wanted two great helps the shepherd-poet and king possessed. He wanted an age and an aim worthy of his great soul. Instead of being born at a time when his people were emerging from anarchy and barbarism, with all the freshness of a youthful faith; ready to receive with joy their God-appointed teacher and leader, his lot was cast at the end of an age when the fires of enthusiasm and faith had burnt out, and nothing was left but the the belief in the possibility of a God-sent Man, and almost in the possibility of any real greatness So, too, his great powers were wasted for want of an aim. Instead of following his vocation, he was making useless attempts at farming, riding post-baste. over the country in the pursuit of his dutyas a gauger, "grinding," as he sardonically puts it," the faces of the publican and the sinner on the merciless wheels of the excise." Thus he had neither time nor opportunity to grow in mind or soul, and the man who seemed born to renew the age sank overcome by its corruption. For this result both Burns and his generation were to blame, being payable on the issue of the Policy. The world was delighted to read his vorses and to hear him talk; but as to there being unything sacred in the man, any voice of God to their consciences in the truths he scattered so freely, how could they be expected to imagine such a possibility, when they believed that the highest vocation of all was only an art which any one might learn' in the theological schools, and carefully studied elecution and rheteric? They could, if they would, have helped him to literary culture, to robe himself in a more stately manner, to use correct action, to put in the emphasis in the right place; nay, indeed, they could have assisted him with MANCHESTER FIRE ASSURANCE COMrules for attaining a true taste, where to put in the pathos, and where to rise to the sublime. But they had no notion that a man could do much more than write pretty or witty verses who had not passed under their ferules and come out labelled " Master of Arts:" no notion that a peasant poet might early education, his hereditary faith, could altogether forget it. But the conviction ! which had taken such hold on him when ho wrote "The Vision," graw fainter and fainter until at last it came to be only a passing thought, and all he claimed was to be rogarded as one of the intelligent men of the day. But his divine treasure, what did be do with that? He came to treat it as men do other noble gifts or great estates, with scarce a thought of the responsibility of their possession. Thus he wasted his Master's goods: wasted them in Edinburgh drawingrooms; on gentlemen of the Caledonian bunt; in Dumfries tap-rooms, Right and left he scattered his precious wealth of mind and heart, a true prodigal son, spending all he had in riotous living. Alas! "the prophet was a fool, and the spiritual man was mad!" The poverty he so much dreaded, and took such pains to protect himself from, camo upon him. His duties as a gauger, and his espeial pleasures, interfered with the management of the farm. After three years and a half he had to resign it, and his salary in the Excise baving been raised-to £70 a year, he removed to a small house in Dumries.
